Harris Wulfson from JCS

For those of you posting long enough to have been part of the Jazz Central Station community, I'm sad to report that Harris Wulfson passed away this week. Harris built the original BBS there (and created the hidden "chair"). He was also a talented composer and violinist; some of you may remember hearing him play at the Knitting Factory.

I got the news from another former JCser, Jill Maxi Schreiber, who wrote:
"i believe you knew harris wulfson from n2k ... wanted you to know that he died a few days ago and was buried today. i don't know a whole lot about it, only that he went missing from a nyc hospital a few days ago. am hoping that there will be some kind of gathering, but don't see anything happening yet. if you are still in touch with any jcs folks from the bbs, maybe you can let them know."

I lost touch with Harris a few years after N2K shut down JCS, but I remember him fondly as a brilliant and creative man. For those of you who knew him (and even those who didn't), there is a short entry on him in Wikipedia that has a link to some of his music.

He will be missed.

VERY sad to hear of Harris's passing, but great to hear from you Laurie.

Harris Wulfson (1974-2008) was a composer, instrumentalist and software engineer living in Brooklyn, New York. His work employs algorithmic processes and gestural controllers to explore the boundary where humans encounter their machines.

He was involved in the creation of various custom software tools called Automatic Notation

Join Date: Mar 2003
Location: New York state
Posts: 11,425

Generators (ANGs) developed to aid in the creation of algorithmic instrumental compositions. In August 2007, he spoke on the topic of ANGs at the International Computer Music Conference in Copenhagen, Denmark.

For the 2006 Look and Listen Festival in New York City, Harris Wulfson presented his SensorBall, a small electronic device, slightly larger than a baseball, with pressure-sensitive controls, all wired to a laptop computer and the results channeled through loudspeakers. When pressed and rotated, the ball produces sounds that erupt apparently without pattern.[1]

Harris graduated from Amherst College and later received an MFA from the California Institute of the Arts.[2]

Harris was also an accomplished violinist, accordionist, and mandolin player.

You can find samples of Wulfson's compositions at <http://wulfson.com>

If I am a problem to you, that's an absolute disrespect to my dead Mother.

I'm very sorry to learn of Harris' passing, Laurie. He was a very creative person, to say the least, and an internet innovator to be sure. What a shame. And he was such a young cat!

I don't if you remember me from the JCS days, but I remember you and Jill fondly and have wondered about you both over the years. Please don't be a stranger.

R.I.P., Harris Wulfson~

Yes, I remember Harris Wulfson. Seems like such a long time ago. Thanks, Laurie.

RIP - Harris

The Chair provided Deep, Mr. Conan Nado, and assorted other interesting characters with a venue to express themselves more fully. Rest in peace, Mr. Wulfson.

That was a cool concept that was pulled off so successfully. Harris didn't tell anyone about it, he just let users find it and have fun. Well it was a gift he gave us. Very sorry to hear of his passing. Thanks for the news, Laurie, glad to hear from you.

Join Date: Mar 2003 Posts: 5,236	there was nothing like the excitement of discovering the old Jazz Central Station and discovering my new friends. Who would have thought a few years prior that anything like that (and this place as well) could ever exist.
	And discovering that were more than a few people who shared the same love for some of the same music... and the get togethers were very special to me. The memories now mean more than they did a few years back when I was in a very bad space and place.
	and finding out about new music through this place was quite an experience and spreading my thoughts and feelings about what I discovered helped me keep it together when eventually nothing else mattered.

Gary Sisco The Bluegrass	RIP to Harris. We used to call him "our Creator" and he was, in lots of ways. Very sorry to hear this. He was much too young and creative to meet his fate so soon.
	Also great to see both Laurie and Stevie Rey show up not just on the board but on the same thread. I miss you both and hope you both are doing well.

Randy was the best of us, I think.

I haven't heard anything from Josh in quite a while. Anyone know how he's doing?

About six or seven years ago, shortly after having moved to Jersey City, I was in my car, probably going home from Hoboken, attempting to cross the stream of traffic heading into the Holland Tunnel. As usual, there were some idiots who were blocking the intersection when the light turned green for me. I looked up and one of them was Heisler.

"Heisler!", I yelled, "Get that fucking car out of the intersection!"

He was startled (chortle), then we laughed and waved to each other.

Last time I saw him!

Wow. Too young. RIP Harris.

Good to hear from Laurie too. I think Laurie took us out in the city one night and we met Harris but maybe I'm scrambling names.

I've yet to find a web interface that I liked as much as the one at JCS. It seemed to work well. Of course, it could be that there weren't as many of us back then... or it could be nostalgia.

Take it to the chair! 😊

I have fond memories of JCS and Harris' creative vision for that board and ability to realize it were big reasons why. I loved that place, and the cast of characters that frequented it. Some are still here, some have moved on.

RIP, Harris.

There was also wild poltically radical guy name Mark, who was a blast. There was also Roger ("Songscout"), Chris Albertson, Billy Baltimore, Professor Dave, Mich (who was dating DD Jackson at around that time); a young musician who's name escapes me who came to my first hang from far away Canada and who's slogan was "centralparknorth", Others who either predated my arrival or appeared shortly after I came aboard, included Deep, Lala, Tim Kroesen, Carlton (who loved the LP "Live at Pips"), AJ, frankiepop, saxnova (Joel Frahm), Jiveman (Phil Grenadier). Soon thereafter "Rollerhead" appeared. He morphed into our beloved Rollhead. Jill Maxi was at the helm. so, to those who knew harris, it's good that we all hold a piece of a memory of a fine person.
it seems impossible that this is true.

i'm glad to see you all. the time i spent at jcs was amazing in so many ways. facebook and all these (silly) web 2.0 sites have NOTHING on the chair.

may all who grieve for harris wulfson find peace and comfort as they reckon with this untimely and tragic piece of news. may all beings be at peace without exception.

Marc Lombardo, I think was the radical

I saw Cecil Taylor with Professor Dave - a trio with Dominic Duval & Jackson Krall. Abdullah Ibrahim opened with his trio.

I remember Dominic Duval telling me that Cecil referred to Ibrahim as half a dollar or something to that effect.

yeah - this was 1997/98. I believe the Andrew Hill premier of the sextet was in 1998 at the Knitting Factory Festival. A bunch of us also saw Dave Holland's quintet that year with Potter, Eubanks, Nelson & the great Billy Kilson on drums.

a few of us were amazed and talked long into the night after a few of those shows at the height of Layer Thelil's imaginative powers sisco - do I have the time frame right?

Randy Oliver wrote one of the nicest messages to me at JCS. I doubt if there's any record of it, but it showed how much of a class act he was. I also remember someone, either one of his family members or a friend, writing to either JCS or Jazzcorner shortly after he passed away, explaining how much our BBS fraternity/sorority meant to him. Bittersweet stuff. So many good people gone far too early....

Oh man I was just thinking about you the other day.

I am really sorry to hear about Harris. JCS started up about '96. That when i was on a contract for NASA and it was my intro to the Internet. Those were some exciting times going out on line and finding other jazz lovers. I felt like I was dealing with pioneers.

Man, this has become some thread!

Shouts out to Jill and others.

I came online in '97 and found JCS on my first-ever search. I typed in jazz and JCS came up first. Already online then, I know (meaning I remember for sure), were Steve(theil), Darryl Thomas (a JCS original poster, I believe), Bruce Woods, Dr Dave, Jill (of course), Laurie, Kim Berry, Randy Oliver, Kevin Bresnahan, Cookie, Steve Reynolds I think was on JCS already before me, Jimmy Cantiello, too, I think. Brian was on already, too, I remember, young Alex came online somewhere in there. I can't remember if Josh was on yet before me but I think he was. Anthony and Paul B also, in there in the early days ... oh hell, a whole buttload of characters. One I was wondering about yesterday who I really enjoyed was Lt. Jim, a drummer. There was also another woman whose name I'm spacing on at the moment. Tippy's friends with her and will remember for me, I think. The two of them met up by chance with Jimmy Cantiello and crew, Pete Cherches, and myself outside 55 one night and then we went to hear some music at the Knickerbocker. She was also there for one of Pete's dinners organized in Chinatown. I can't remember if that's the night we heard Joanne Brackeen and Cecil McBee or was that a different time. I recall there were at least two excursions to that place for late night drinks and music.

The first regular posters I met up with in person were Kevin and Dr Dave. We met up at Stereo Jack's in Cambridge and then if I remember it right, we went out for food at a soul food place, and then to the Regattabar to hear Pat Martino.

The first I met up with in person in New York, at the first hang, were Laurie, who was my gracious host, and Steve Reynolds. I was at the bar already and Steve was the first other to show up. He approached me at the bar and said, Are you Sisco? We had at least one, maybe two, drinks before the rest started showing up.

The first hang, at the Burrito Bar, followed by the now legendary Andrew Hill concert at the Knit, would then have been in '98, the following summer. I sat next to Jill in the balcony of the Knit's main room.

Cookie and I were roomies in Laurie's apartment for the first hang, the apartment way downtown by WTC.

Bruce Woods used to check in with me now and then but I haven't heard a word in years, now. Second NYC hang, I think it was, Bruce and I hooked up the night before and went to the VV to hear Osby and Lovano's Friendly Fire project, with Jason Moran (who we talked with out on the street by the VV sign because Bruce already knew him), Idris Muhammad, and Cameron Brown. A really slamming show. The Friendly Fire record hadn't yet been officially released.

Away from the delusionary forces that turn music into a step to fame and fortune it becomes a reason to live." (David Morris)

It was very shortly before a NYC hang. Day before maybe? That was a very sad thing. I had a tape in progress on my stereo counter for years, I was making for Randy and didn't get it finished in time to send it to him. His family didn't know about his jazz life and were really surprised at the tons of sympathy they received from people they hadn't known were even in Randy's life. He touched all with real sincerity. He might have been the only real Christian I've ever personally known, apart from my mom. Really nice guy. Steve was the first JC'er I ever met, but that was at the Keswick Theater in Philly to hear David Murray. Steve's wife also came as did my friend from work, Bob. I remember Steve and I both being surprised at how subdued Andrew Cyrille was that night. I think the late John Hicks was on piano. Steve, who was on bass, Ray Drummond? Kevin B, who was your friend who came to some of the hangs? I remember talking to him at Birdland one night.  Quote

Hi Jill. So great to cyber-see you once again. Major deja vu-ski.

Yep. I remember her. She was the (then) teenaged bassist from (Western?) Canada I mentioned. Fantastic that her career and life have worked out so nicely.

Woah, it's great to see so many of the old gang still actively posting. I do miss the camaraderie and especially Apu. :-)

Thanks for the greetings. I'm sorry that it took something like this to get me back on the board. But it's been great reading all the recollections and I'm glad that something good came out this.

And if anyone hears from Josh, please tell him to contact me (same old email, never changes). Josh & Jill and I worked together at a failed dot-com in 2000 and I remember Josh and I posting on the board like crazy during work and laughing out loud, even though we sat about 3 feet away from each other. We had all moved over here to JC by then.

BTW, after N2K laid everyone off and supposedly folded JCS, it was Harris that kept the board up and running for a long time. He will be missed.

Sorry to hear of this passing.....he was just a year older than my daughter.

What's interesting to me is that in today's higher speed world [in terms of communication and digital/web based music & video, etc] these are stories from 10 years ago or less that sound like "the good old days."

I found JCS toward the very end.
From what I remember the little spats here today, are of the nursery school variety compared to the wars I recall there back in the day. I remember one night where someone absolutely unloaded with what seemed like hundreds of repetitive posts that cluttered up the whole joint.

I was certain I had found the cyber nut-house!

Tell me more about The Chair????

I agree completely, Steve. And in many ways, all of that is a tribute to Harris..... what a tragedy.

Hardbop Chris Heaney decided long ago that his time was better spent than arguing non-stop with Chris Albertson. I don't think he's even on-line anymore. Believe it or not, he was a much nicer guy in person than he was on-line. He just hated any Jazz that went outside of his perceived boundaries.

BTW, I just left a voice message on Heisler's phone. I wonder if he'll check in here??

I met him once. Josh introduced me to him at a boring Kind of Blue 40th anniversary concert. He was very shy. I got the impression he was one of those guys who only had cojones through the shield of the internet--like Monte Heaney was a great guy to buy OOP CDs from. When he'd get the Mosaic boxes, the rare single discs would go on sale. I got some nice Japanese '50s Mobleys and Dexter's "Clubhouse" from him.

The one Chicago "hang" back in the day wound up being me and Rob Carpenter, the singer who liked pie. Everyone else wussed. He and his friends brought airline-size bottles of hooch, and we got plastered while enjoying Branford in Grant Park.

Hardbop Heaney and Josh came along for the ride. They couldn't believe I was going to drive downtown. They said driving in New York City was insane and that I couldn't handle it. I told them it couldn't be any worse than Boston. I was right. Although a couple of yellow cabs came awfully close. 😊 Funniest moment during that ride was when Josh popped in Anthony Braxton's "Charlie Parker Project". Hardbop was saying, "Hey, Josh actually has some real Jazz." Then Braxton swings it out and Josh is laughing hysterically as Hardbop's face fell. It was pretty funny. Kevin

We had dinner the evening before at a restaurant downtown, not far the Knit. That was the night I heard a killin' concert at the Knit that featured first Steve Coleman really smoking, followed by Greg Osby in a quartet featuring Jason Moran, first time I'd ever heard Jason. I was floored by both sets and, I couldn't believe it when I got there, I had my choice of front row seats. I've been a huge Osby and Moran fan ever since because I'm telling you what, both those bands that night were on fire. One of the best shows I've ever heard, any kind of music. Just great. I remember Ashley and am happy to hear she's doing well. She was awesome. I can certainly say that the bulletin board saved my sanity. I was working at the Lighthouse for the Blind doing nothing all day long. I guess nobody had a real job either cause you guys posted more than me. And the Chair, great stuff. Man Deep, Conan, those guys were off the hook. Remember Conan's cd? I actually threw that out recently. That was a mistake. Here's another memory. Remember the Music Blvd. coupons? Ah man we cleaned up. Was that you Kevin? I seem to think so. I know I came away with a few box sets because of that one.

Hey bring back Heaney! I got some more Braxton for him. I miss that guy. I enjoyed out Chris & Josh NYC thread. That was fun. I actually used to catch like 3 or 4 sets a week.

Anyway shout out to Kevin for giving me a holla. I'm in Cambridge at the moment. Where can I catch some jazz? And are you free Thursday (tomorrow night)? My bad Sisco for not getting back to you. I was really not in a good place at that time. But I can say I'm much better now. I got married in February to the love of my life. She's wonderful. We're both committed to fighting for a more just school system. And I'm teaching in Manhattan at a small progressive high school.

Big up Reynolds (man I miss you bro). Jesus you got the lil here? Damn that is old school. What's up with DuPree? I got a few bets with him I want to place. Much love to Laurie. Send me an email at joshheisler@earthlink.net. Man this is the reunion thread to end all thread. Good to see you all.

Nice to see you surface, too, Josh. I have no clue as to whether you'll remember me or not, but even "back in the day" I was a stone-cold Jim Pepper fan. Sound familiar?

The coupons were called "Gordons" in honor of you-know-who...that was a lot of fun.

Finding unadvertised coupons were almost as much fun as using them. I remember taking the codes in the urls and changing the numbers in them.

Josh, still listen to the Soft Machine cds you bought at DMG with me one day? The record safaris before the hangs were a lot of fun.

Josh, glad to see you're doing well. Congratulations on your marriage. It's always good to have a partner in crime.

I remember the time that you went to Belize and couldn't use your credentials for that year's IAJE conference (2000/2001?). Iirc you and Laurie were working for a company by the name of Zabaco? Anyway, you hooked me up. I picked up the credentials at the entrance desk and I was Josh for a day. That's the day I met Dr. Dave and Lois. Matter of fact, I think I still have the lanyard with your and the company's name. Good times.

This is a time machine. I can't believe some of the people's names I'm seeing here. It's good to catch up. I think I'll start a jazz thread!

Now THAT is bizarre.

I'd love it if JCS / the Chair was archived somewhere. When it was closing down I printed out dozens of pages. I have to try to find them.

For the life of me I can't remember if it was called 'Smooth' or 'Contemporary' but it was where I'd spout my Fusion/Latin Jazz schtick. I recall lot's of good exchanges with Doug R. (Jazzoo) and Brian P. (traded some 1st rate stuff with him!). I remember there was this gal who used to work the door at Yoshi's (according to her) that managed to get my phone number and called me on New Year's Eve to wish me a Happy. All I can say is that my live-in ladyfriend at the time (hot-blooded, very jealous Cuban!!) did NOT appreciate it! 😊

Gary, the last time I heard from Woods, and it's been years, I think he was separating from his wife. I don't know how that worked out in the end, but at the time it was killing his enthusiasm for some things. Didn't he name his daughter after a Stephen Scott song?

Maybe he has other, better things to do, now, I hope. Away from the delusionary forces that turn music into a step to fame and fortune it becomes a reason to live." (David Morris)
